GOLD - One Commodity For All

Unlocking the Potential Of Commodity Futures

A Great Diversifier

Commodity futures are one of the most active forms of investment trading today. Some investors choose to engage solely in commodity futures as a means of generating revenue from an investment portfolio. Others choose to vary investments somewhat including stock and bond options alongwith commodity futures in their investment strategies. Commodities have very little or negative correlation with other asset classes such as equities, which makes them a good diversifier to reduce the volatility of returns in a portfolio. They are widely used to balance a trading portfolio.

With fewer factors at play, commodity markets are easy to understand.

For long, the investment universe for Indians consisted of stocks, jewellery, real-estate and bonds. Yet another avenue has now opened up. Commodity markets are easier to understand than one imagines; unlike equities, commodities touch everyday life. Also, unlike equities, commodities do not carry management risks.

With fewer factors at play in the commodities market, it is easier to forecast the direction of prices.
